Baby Boom series reference guide

by ShawnaCanon

Summary

Just a quick reference guide for my fic 'Baby Boom' and its sequels. For if you can't remember who child characters are or who has what Miraculous and such. May contain spoilers for the whole series. Will be updated as I continue the series.

Chapter 1

Note: Since we don't know precisely what year Miraculous is meant to take place in, when it comes to dates in this guide, I'm using a story-specific way of noting them. Year 0 is the year that the Fairy Grandmother babies are born, and it goes on from there.

General notes on the universe of this story –

Luka is two years older than Juleka. No mention is ever made of their father or who he is. It's not a topic that's ever brought up one way or the other.

Miss Bustier was unmarried as of the beginning of Baby Boom. (It was my best guess, given how frequently people in the show clearly call her 'Miss', but they also call her 'Ms.', so I went with what was most interesting for the story.)

This story is AU as of some time before the season three finale, and I'm mostly ignoring any new canon after that. (I'm not even watching season four yet, but even when I do, I'll keep this AU clean of it.) The only times I might bring in season four info is if I need a kwami name, superhero name, power, etc. and don't have an idea of my own that I'd rather use.

In the world of this story, Miraculous superheroes are basically the only superheroes in the world. Alya's references to other superheroes are mostly taken as admiring fictional superheroes. All Miraculouses aside from the ones in the Paris set are assumed to be in the possession of the Guardians (until they decide to give them out).

Misc. OCs (not child characters) –

Pierre – The boy who got caught in the gas with Chloe. Nephew of Chloe's butler. Two years older than Chloe. In love with her for a while (from afar) before the attack. Was a busboy when it happened but got fired when their connection was found out. Fairly tall and slim with blue eyes and blond hair that's a little bit long. Good-looking in a pretty kind of way. No surname given (it's probably the same as Chloe's butler, whatever that is), but in the future, he marries Chloe and takes her last name.

Victor Chemise – The man who was caught in the gas with Miss Bustier. Owns a bookstore. Had been flirting with her for a while. When they finally went out on a date, the gas got them. The two married during Baby Boom (Miss Bustier became Mrs. Chemise but let her class keep calling her Miss Bustier because it was what they were used to). He's handsome and has brown hair.

Kyo Kasahara – The boy that Kagami got caught in the gas with. A Japanese fencer who's the same age as her. They were at an invitation-only fencing event when it happened. That was the first time she'd met him. After it happened, they spent more time together, and he fell in love first. Because of social/family reasons, they were basically arranged-married at the end of Baby Boom. Kagami was not quite in love with him at that point, but she got there before too long.

Jerome a.k.a. Duke (ring name) – Doesn't actually appear in Baby Boom, but he's one of Nora's sparring partners, and they were sparring when the gas hit. Like her, he's big and muscular and a semi-professional MMA fighter. (He hasn't shown up in the series at all yet, but I have a fun idea for him and Nora, and I think I might explore it a little with them as side characters in an upcoming fic called Alternating Currents.)

Child characters –

The Fairy Grandmother children who appear in Baby Boom:

Louis Agreste – son of Adrien and Marinette

Keva Lahiffe – daughter of Nino and Alya

Coccinelle Anciel – daughter of Marc (bio mother Mireille; adoptive mother Juleka)

Aleron and Daniel Kurtzberg – identical twin sons of Nathaniel and Alix (Aleron's last name was Kubdel until Nathaniel and Alix married)

Renée Dupain-Cheng – daughter of Tom and Sabine (Marinette's sister)

Sebastien Agreste – son of Gabriel and Nathalie (Adrien's half-brother)

Clarisse Bourgeois – daughter of Chloe and Pierre

Shigure Kasahara – son of Kagami and Kyo

Lê Fleur Romy – daughter of Kim and Ondine

Fairy Grandmother children who don't actually appear in Baby Boom but show up in the sequels:

Yemaya Césaire – daughter of Nora (Alya's sister) and Duke

Destin Chemise – son of Miss Bustier and Victor Chemise

Nickel Stone – son of Jagged Stone and Penny (the two of them married offscreen not long after the end of Baby Boom)

Leon Chamack – son of Nadia and her husband (Manon's brother)

Jeanne – daughter of Butler Jean-(mumble) and one of the maids at the hotel

Other children who come later (not complete):

Emma Agreste – daughter of Adrien and Marinette

Hugo Agreste – son of Adrien and Marinette

Esmé Lahiffe – daughter of Nino and Alya

Joni Lahiffe – daughter of Nino and Alya

Nanette and Fifine Kurtzberg – twin daughters of Nathaniel and Alix

Luc Anciel – son of Marc and Juleka

Milo Couffaine – son of Luka and Mireille

Narumi Kasahara – daughter of Kagami and Kyo

Louis's class in school (when he's 14) –

Mrs. Chemise (formerly Miss Bustier) is their teacher. Lucy is a FG baby of someone who works as a dresser at Gabriel. Javert is a non-FG baby (born a few months earlier) who's lumped in with them because of his age and hates it; he thinks the FG kids are creepy. Aleron and Daniel switch seats periodically for kicks and assume the teacher doesn't notice (she does, but it's not disruptive, so she allows it and plays along).

Seating chart, back to front (as if veiwing from teacher's POV):

Destin, Romy — Lucy, Javert

Coccinelle, Aleron — Nickel, Renee

Leon, Daniel — Keva, Yemaya

Jeanne, Clarisse — Louis, Sebastien

Miraculous stuff –

Kwami: Orikko

Butterfly Miraculous when being used for good

Activation/deactivation phrase: Wings Rise/Wings Fall

Special ability: Champion (creates a 'fairy' [not akuma] from nothing, which appears as a ball of light with butterfly-style wings, which then 'empowers' [not akumatizes] a person who becomes the hero's champion)

timelines

In this story, the idea of different timelines aren't so much separate alternate universes but rather overlapping strings of causality within the same universe. This is why when Keva and Louis returned to their own time after changes were made, they were 'merged' with the versions of themselves that existed there, gaining memories of that timeline because now they had lived that life as well as the one they lived before they went back in time.

The timeline shifts happened at points where someone made a choice that resulted in significant changes.

Timeline 1:
After finding out that Hawkmoth knew their identities, Marinette didn't send anyone forward in time to try to find replacements. Instead, she simply gave Fu all of the Miraculouses, and he took them away. In this timeline, none of the characters know where Fu or the Miraculouses are in the future. For three years after Marinette gave back the Miraculouses, Hawk Moth continued to attack periodically to lure out the Ladybug and Black Cat Miraculouses, though he was a bit more careful in how much damage he caused, since no one was actually fixing anything. His attempts got more and more rote and "I may as well keep up just in case" while he looked for other alternatives. Eventually, he found the magic item that he gets in "Mother of the Groom" and does essentially the same thing, using it to waken Emilie. Except since he has his powers, he's able to fight and defeat the montster that comes out before the monster escapes into the city. So he's able to convincingly tell everyone that she 'just woke up'. Since he's got what he wanted now, he puts the Butterfly Miraculous in his safe, and as far as anyone in the city knows, either Hawk Moth died somehow or he just decided to give up terrorising them.

Timeline 2:
White Rabbit does go into the future on his mission, but instead of starting in the far future and hopping backward in time, he only visits the point 21 years in the future (where Louis and Keva are young adults). The grown versions of Adrien and Marinette that he meets there are the ones who lived through Timeline 1. They tell him what they experienced, that they had just given up the Miraculouses and Hawk Moth eventually gave up, though they never retrieved his Miraculous. This isn't the answer to "who is Ladybug in the future" that White Rabbit had been after, but it did mean that the problem would sort itself out on its own. Sure, there was some physical damage to Paris because of Hawk Moth's repeated attacks, but they seemed to have bounced back from it well enough. White Rabbit returns to his own time and reports to Marinette what he found. She decides that they can just do what they did in Timeline 1. She gives all the Miraculouses to Fu, and he goes into hiding with them.

Timeline 3:
This is the one in the story. The difference here is that instead of going straight to the near future, White Rabbit tries out some farther futures first. He finds out that things go very badly for Earth without the heroes around to help. First, there's a devastating world war, and then while the world is trying to recover from that, aliens come in and take over the weakened earth without too much of a fight, leading to alien overlords and humans not really even having the will to challenge the aliens' rule. When he goes to the near future and finds out the Hawk Moth thing sorted itself out on its own, he's sort of like, "That's great, but the Earth still needs the heroes. Hawk Moth isn't the only problem." So even though he can't bring back the information about who Ladybug is in the future, he makes a judgement call to bring back someone who can take on that roll, to help out with the current Hawk Moth situation so that Marinette and the rest of them can make sure heroes are around to deal with those much larger problems that Earth will face.
